

Elizabeth Miller
HBA Secretary Nomination

Candidate Bio: I am an Associate Professor of Anthropology at University of South Florida and currently serve as Undergraduate Director for the department. I have been a member of the HBA since 2005 and have served on the Publications committee since 2017. I also served on the Program Committee in 2016. My research investigates breastfeeding, immune functions, and microbiomes in diverse populations of mothers and infants. I also research women's iron deficiency using an evolutionary framework.

Platform Statement: I am honored to be nominated for the position of Secretary. I believe that the position of Secretary serves an important role in supporting HBA leadership, recording the activities of the Association, and communicating with the membership. My organizational skills and leadership experience in departmental and university committees position me to undertake this role. I look forward to intensifying my service to the HBA and its members.
